GREENHOUSE SENSATION

Summer Watering Covered

Foodies who would rather cook up a storm in the kitchen than dig a hole in the garden can be left green with envy as celebrity chefs extol the virtues of home-grown ingredients from their bountiful gardens. A new range of ‘Grow’ planters which simply ‘Can’t Grow Wrong’ promise that even the most short of space and time can be harvesting home grown salads, chillies, herbs and veg in as little as six weeks.

The ‘Grow’ planters are sets of pots that only need watering every few days. They can be used indoors or outdoors in a space as small as a windowsill. Just add seeds or young plants, fill with compost and add water to the planter’s hidden reservoir, then relax whilst the SmartMats in each pot pull the water up when plants need it. The clever design prevents over and under-watering – the two biggest causes of disappointing harvests and plant demise!

Greenhouse Sensation's Emma Lowther-Wright explained: “Even those who usually struggle to keep the hardiest of pot plants healthy, have no green space, or lack any inclination to dig a hole – ‘can’t grow wrong’ with these new planters.”

Herbs and salad are ready to be cut and used in as little as six weeks. A space the size of a windowsill is sufficient for growing lettuce, radish, spring onions, herbs, beetroot and even dwarf tomatoes and dwarf chillies.

The British made Grow planters make perfect Christmas gifts, especially if also given with seeds and compost, so the cook can get sowing on Christmas day whilst others wash up.
